Message from the Chair,
Sir Emyr Jones Parry GCMG, PhD, FInstP

I find it difficult to believe that this is my sixth contribution to an Annual Report of REDRESS' activities over the past year. Yet today the situation on global human rights is no better than in 2008.

The number of refugees and displaced persons has now leapt to over 50 million. Shamefully torture is all too prevalent. It may be illegal and counterproductive, but we increasingly witness it, particularly in areas of conflict. Its use is an affront to us all and strikes at the core of human rights. So sadly there has been no diminution in the work of REDRESS. Indeed our case load continues to increase as REDRESS has further established itself as a champion of torture survivors, recognised for the quality of its work, and active across continents and legal institutions.

This year saw REDRESS working in more than 25 countries and with about 850 individual survivors. We had a notable victory at the Inter American Court where Mr Garcia Lucero won his 40 year battle for justice for the torture he endured in Chile under the Pinochet regime. We have welcomed positive steps by the British Foreign Secretary in galvanising support for his Prevention of Sexual Violence Initiative. But at the same time we note sadly that the ICC Prosecutor has found it necessary to re-open a preliminary examination into the allegations of systematic detainee abuse at the hands of British soldiers in Iraq, because she was unpersuaded by the actions being taken domestically in the UK to investigate and prosecute the range of allegations. All governments need to match words and deeds in the fight to eliminate the scourge of torture.

Again, REDRESS is indebted to our staff for their talent and unflagging efforts on behalf of survivors and to combat torture. This is recognised as high quality work, delivered by a small dedicated team. It has been a pleasure to welcome back our director, Carla Ferstman, after her sabbatical year in Washington. Funding REDRESS is an ongoing challenge, so our warmest thanks to all those donors who support us and ensure that we have the resources to do our work, and to our patrons, old and new, for their encouragement. Working with partners increases our effectiveness and we also greatly appreciate that collaboration.

We have become more vocal about communicating the details of our work, thanks to the commitment of our Communications Officer Eva Sanchis. This Annual Report describes our activities and sets out our financial performance. I commend it to you. My personal thanks go to my fellow trustees, and to our director and to our loyal staff.

Message from the Director, Carla Ferstman

As always, it is an honour and a pleasure to lead the committed and talented team of professionals at REDRESS, to work with some of the most dynamic civil society groups around the world and to have the opportunity to make a difference in the lives of some of the most vulnerable people who have suffered so much.

Our work is neither for the faint-hearted nor for those who crave quick solutions or easy results. But a review of this Annual Report will show that patience can bring rewards. More and more of our clients are receiving positive judgments from human rights courts and related tribunals. More and more survivors and lawyers working on their behalf in all regions of the world have joined forces with REDRESS to pursue remedies for torture and related international crimes. Impunity remains a deep-seated problem in many countries where we work but with the combined efforts of REDRESS and other organisations, it is a problem that can be confronted and can be overcome.

I am grateful to the trustees of REDRESS for their continued support. Many have been with REDRESS for a long time which has given an important continuity to the organisation. I am also grateful to our founder and Honorary President Keith Carmichael for his vision in establishing REDRESS more than 20 years ago and to the staff for their daily efforts to give justice to this vision.

REDRESS is fortunate to work with a range of lawyers, academics, students and volunteers all of whom are invaluable to our efforts. Thank you as well to the range of foundations, institutions, governments and individuals who continue to see value in funding our work.

“More and more survivors and lawyers working on their behalf in all regions of the world have joined forces with REDRESS to pursue remedies for torture and related international crimes.”

REDRESS is an international human rights organisation with a mandate to seek justice and reparation for survivors of torture and related international crimes. It was established on 10 December 1992. The organisation was founded to ensure that survivors' rights to justice and reparation are capable of being enforced in practice.

REDRESS is based in London, and works both locally and globally in partnership with a range of counterparts. In the United Kingdom, REDRESS works directly with torture survivors who are based in the United Kingdom and front-line service providers on a variety of legal and associated support needs. REDRESS carries out research, policy and advocacy work to make certain that the UK and other governments comply fully with their international obligations to prohibit torture and other cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment and punishment and afford redress to torture survivors.

Internationally, REDRESS works at the grassroots level with victims' communities, with governments, legal practitioners and civil society groups in a range of countries, and regularly influences policies and debates regionally and internationally. Its direct involvement with victims' efforts to seek justice provides it with important insights into endemic barriers that it works to overcome internationally.

REDRESS has received awards for its work; its research is cited regularly by international and national policy makers, academics, activists and increasingly the media. REDRESS' legal casework has led to positive judgments for torture survivors; this has not only given a measure of acknowledgment and redress to the individuals concerned, but has also helped to fuel the global efforts of lawyers, civil society groups and the victims themselves to call upon their governments to afford justice and reparation for torture.

What was once a small movement by a dedicated few, has spring-boarded into a global movement to break the cycles of impunity for torture and seek effective remedies for its many victims.

Key values that continue to distinguish REDRESS as an organisation and that have enabled it to successfully develop and grow over the past twenty one years include the commitment to victim-centred casework, advocacy and capacity building, ensuring the principle of 'do no harm' alongside the provision of high quality scrupulous research, legal advice and policy guidance.

REDRESS offers a comparative advantage to others because of its commitment to working in partnership with like-minded organisations, both those working in countries where torture and related international crimes are endemic as well as those working globally in areas connected to REDRESS' work. The establishment and maintenance of partnerships, whether informal or formal, can be very resource-intensive, but is considered a priority for REDRESS because joining forces builds strength and widens the potential for lasting impact.

REDRESS' global network of collaborative relationships enables it to work flexibly and in a timely manner on issues over which it has a specific expertise, while sharing knowledge and helping to reinforce the important work of its partners on the ground.

We pursue our objectives through three mutually reinforcing strategies involving litigation, research-based advocacy and capacity building, designed to strengthen the conditions necessary to end impunity for torture and afford survivors redress.

CASEWORK

We provide direct legal assistance to individuals and communities that have suffered torture and related international crimes in securing their rights. We provide legal advice, litigation support and representation to survivors in all regions of the world.

REDRESS provides direct legal assistance to victims and communities who have suffered torture.

ADVOCACY

We seek to positively influence policies, practices, laws and standards to enable justice and reparation for survivors.

REDRESS seeks to influence practices and laws to enable justice for survivors.

CAPACITY BUILDING

Working in partnership with like-minded organisations, REDRESS provides technical assistance and support to civil society organisations and networks as well as national authorities around the world to combat torture and help survivors.

We work along four broad programme areas to advance our mission:

CASEWORK: to provide direct legal support to torture survivors to obtain justice and redress

JUSTICE IN THE CONTEXT OF MASS

VICTIMISATION: to obtain justice and redress for torture survivors in situations of violent conflict, or in those societies emerging from, or having emerged from, a period of mass human rights violations

INFLUENCING NATIONAL LAWS AND

INSTITUTIONS: working collaboratively to promote strong national legal frameworks and institutions that reflect international standards and are enforced in practice to promote and strengthen international standards and regional and international institutions that reflect survivors' rights to justice and reparation.

CASEWORK

Helping torture survivors is central to REDRESS' mandate. We provide wide-ranging legal advice and support to survivors to help them achieve adequate and effective remedies.

The types of cases taken by REDRESS include: criminal complaints against alleged perpetrators; civil claims for compensation and other remedies; claims for consular support and the exercise of diplomatic protection; administrative claims against public bodies relating to the failure to carry out diligently their mandates; support to survivors to access national human rights commissions and/or other inquiry processes operating in the country.

REDRESS also uses its good offices to assist survivors to make contact with government officials, whether to obtain apologies or other measures or to assist them to access primary support. Internationally, REDRESS uses regional and international courts and related quasi- and non-judicial mechanisms when local remedies fail.

In addition to direct litigation work, REDRESS provides support and advice to local and/or international lawyers on points of law and the development of legal strategies and frequently acts as amicus curiae (friend of the court) on areas in which it has expertise.

These cases are important to the individuals and communities directly concerned; they also serve the additional purpose of advancing the rule of law and the fight against torture worldwide.

Our client Ebenezer Akwanga visited our offices in London in June 2013. Mr Akwanga was tortured for his peaceful activism in Cameroon. In 2011, the UN Human Rights Committee found unanimously in his favour and urged Cameroon to compensate him.

At present, REDRESS has approximately 132 live cases concerning about 850 survivors. These concern women, men and child survivors of torture, committed during relative peace and in times of conflict. The survivors can be suspects of ordinary crimes, tortured to obtain confessions. They also concern human rights defenders, protesters and others tortured to quash dissent, or persons from marginalised ethnic, religious or other minorities tortured to keep them in submission. Torture is indiscriminate. It affects all strata of society.

Currently REDRESS' caseload (aside from general assistance work) is broken down as follows:

UN Human Rights Committee	19
International Criminal Court	4
European Court of Human Rights	8
UN Special Procedures	12
Inter-American System	7
African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights	7
Cases before domestic courts	67
Other	8

466 of these relate to survivors in Africa; 290 in Asia; 31 in Eastern Europe; 43 in Latin America and the Caribbean and 19 in the Western Europe and Other States grouping.

A FEW CASE HIGHLIGHTS IN 2013-4

Landmark judgment for Pinochet-era torture survivor

Don Leopoldo Lucero Garcia has been a client of REDRESS for more than a decade. In 1973, he was detained in the notorious National Stadium in Santiago, and then in other concentration camps. He was repeatedly tortured. He lost all his front teeth, his face was disfigured and his spine severely damaged. He has been disabled since then.

“It is not easy to sue a state, and to do it from abroad without many resources is in my view a heroic act. Today, you have won. Today, you have managed to move mountains, which should be recognised”

Statement by Mr Rodrigo Espinoza, Chargé d'Affaires of the Embassy of Chile on the event of Mr García receiving reparations (7 March 2014).

In 1975, Pinochet's government forcibly expelled him and put him on a plane to the United Kingdom, where he received refugee status. Mr García and his family left behind all their relatives, friends and possessions.

After a long legal battle, in August 2013 the Inter-American Court of Human Rights ruled that Mr García's rights were violated as a result of the continuing lack of justice, forty years after the crimes. The Court ordered Chile to finalise a criminal investigation “within a reasonable time”, and to pay him £20,000 in compensation for moral damages. It also urged Chile to provide adequate funding to Mr. García to cover the costs of his treatment in the UK for continuing medical and psychological ailments.

On 7 March 2014, at a private ceremony at the Chilean Embassy in London, Mr García received his compensation directly from Chilean officials. In a crucial symbolic apology, embassy representatives said that “saying sorry does not erase physical or psychological pain; neither does it relieve the suffering of relatives and loved ones. However, it is an act of contrition. It makes us confront our shameful past acts, come to repent them, and ensure that they are never repeated.”

British aid worker obtains admission from FCO to failings in consular assistance

In 2011 REDRESS was approached by a UK national who was raped by a military officer in Egypt at a checkpoint. She sought assistance both with finding out whether the alleged perpetrator had been prosecuted in Egypt, and in pursuing a complaint against the Foreign & Commonwealth Office (FCO). She believed that not only did she not receive proper support from the British consulate in the country concerned, the acts of the consulate in fact put her in further danger and risk of traumatising.

REDRESS assisted her with locating information on her case within the Egyptian military court system, and when information suggested that the perpetrator had been convicted and sentenced, but that his case was on appeal, liaised with Egyptian organisations to ensure that - in a first for such a case - submissions could be made to the court on her behalf. REDRESS also assisted with the conduct of her complaint through the FCO's internal procedures.

The FCO admitted that aspects of the complaint had been substantiated, and committed to improving training on handling complaints of rape and sexual assault, and updating the global guidelines issued to staff on sexual assault and mistreatment and torture, after belatedly recognising that the complainant was a victim of torture. However, at the conclusion of the internal complaints procedure a significant number of issues remained unresolved. REDRESS

“ I'm really pleased with the Ombudsman's report and very grateful to REDRESS. It was important to fight the Foreign Office on this. Not only did many of their staff fail to do their job to assist me, but their behaviour also reflected a wider pattern of blaming the victim that sexual violence victims often experience ”

Statement by Ms M.

thus prepared a complaint on her behalf to the UK Parliamentary & Health Services Ombudsman.

The Ombudsman upheld the complaint in full. The Ombudsman's report, laid before Parliament in November 2013, found multiple instances of maladministration by the FCO, including that:

- i. The complainant was not given any advice about the support that the FCO could provide her, in particular that they could help arrange a medical examination, and could accompany her to report the crime;
- ii. She was given incorrect advice about forensic evidence;

- iii. Even when the consular staff said they would come to meet her, they failed to follow-through, leaving her fearful of arrest by the military;
- iv. These failures had a serious impacts on the complainant: leading to a lengthy and traumatic experience of reporting the crime on her own (where she was held against her will for a number of hours), fear of arrest by the military, and the need to go through two medical examinations, rather than one. According to the Ombudsman, had the FCO provided appropriate support, her “experience of reporting the crime and receiving medical treatment would have been shorter and less traumatic;”
- v. Their complaints handling was defensive and lengthy, when what she needed was a prompt, complete response to her complaint so she could complete her dealings with the FCO and focus on her recovery.

The Ombudsman recommended, and the FCO accepted, to provide a full apology, £1000 in compensation, and to carry out a full review of the handling of the case.

On the release of the report, Parliamentary Ombudsman, Dame Julie Mellor said: “This is a prime example of how one individual coming forward to complain can lead to significant changes. Having the courage and persistence to seek justice can have an impact, not just for the individual, but for other people who may need to complain in future.”

REDRESS challenges state immunity in the case of photojournalist tortured and killed in Iran

Zahra Kazemi was a Canadian-Iranian photojournalist who was tortured to death in Iran. She was arrested during a visit to Iran in June 2003 while taking photographs of a protest outside Evin prison. While in detention, she was interrogated, beaten and sexually assaulted.

Following the torture, Ms Kazemi was taken to hospital as she was suffering intestinal bleeding and a brain injury. Eventually Ms Kazemi's family was made aware that she was in a critical condition in hospital, but were denied access to her and requests for an independent medical examination and treatment, and for her to be allowed to be transferred to Canada for treatment, were denied.

She was later declared brain-dead with no possibility of recovery, and was buried in Iran, despite many requests of her family to repatriate her body to Canada. Neither Iran nor the officials responsible for her torture and death have been held accountable.

In 2006 Ms Kazemi's son brought a civil claim in the Québec courts against Iran and three officials he alleges were responsible for his mother's torture and death. Iran argued that it and its officials are immune from suit and that the claims should be dismissed under the Canadian State Immunity Act.

In January 2011, the Québec Superior Court allowed Stephan Hashemi's claim to proceed, on the basis of a specific exception in the State Immunity Act that allows claims for injuries suffered in Canada. However, the claims of Ms Kazemi's estate were dismissed on the ground that Iran and its officials were protected by state immunity.

Both sides appealed to the Québec Court of Appeal, and in May 2011 REDRESS was granted leave to appear in the proceedings as an intervener. In August 2011, it filed a submission to the Court on the international law of state immunity as it applies to state officials, and the independent rights of family members of torture victims to remedy and redress.

In August 2012 the Court of Appeal handed down its judgment, finding in Iran's favour that state immunity barred both claims. The claimants sought leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, and this was granted in March 2013. REDRESS was granted leave to intervene in the appeal, and filed its factum on 14 November 2013. The Supreme Court heard oral argument in the case on 18 March 2014, and reserved its judgment. REDRESS is represented pro bono in the proceedings by Azim Hussain and Rahoo Agarwal of Norton Rose Fulbright.

REDRESS challenges Lithuania and Poland over allegations of secret detention and torture

Mr al-Hawsawi faces capital charges before a U.S. Military Commission in Guantánamo Bay, Cuba. The charges relate to his alleged involvement as media organiser and financier in the September 11, 2001 attacks. He is characterised as a High Value Detainee (HVD).

Detailed analysis of publicly available evidence suggests that Mr al-Hawsawi may have been secretly held in CIA black sites in Poland from 7 March 2003 to 22 September 2003 and in Lithuania for an unknown period between March 2004 and September 2006. REDRESS filed complaints with authorities in both countries seeking the opening of an investigation.

In September 2013, REDRESS and the Human Rights Monitoring Institute (HRMI) submitted a complaint in Lithuania asking the Lithuanian prosecutor to conduct an investigation into the suspected criminal offenses committed in Lithuania against Mr al-Hawsawi. The Prosecutor initially refused to do so however after a successful appeal to the Vilnius Regional Court, the Prosecutor-General's office announced in February 2014 that it had opened an investigation.

In November 2013 Polish lawyer Bogumil Zygmunt filed an application on REDRESS' behalf to Polish prosecutors seeking victim status for Mustafa al-Hawsawi in the ongoing Polish investigation into allegations of CIA rendition and secret detention in the country. Like the Lithuanian complaint, the Polish complaint relies on an analysis of publicly available evidence including flight data and suspected movement of other detainees of a similar profile, which points to a strong likelihood that Mr al-Hawsawi was transferred through, and secretly held in, Poland.

On 28 March 2014 the Prosecutor rejected the application for victim status. The reasons for the decision were notified to REDRESS on 18 April 2014, but under Polish criminal procedure they cannot be publicly disclosed. On 25 April 2014, REDRESS appealed the decision to the District Court of Szczytno. The prosecutor is now considering whether to amend the decision or contest the appeal. As part of that process, the Prosecutor called REDRESS to provide further information at a hearing in Kraków on 12 June 2014.

Important victory for REDRESS before African Commission

REDRESS welcomes the decision by Africa's regional human rights treaty body that holds Sudan responsible for the arbitrary arrest, detention, torture and ill-treatment of 88 internally displaced persons (IDPs). The 88 are Sudanese nationals who, having fled from Southern Sudan, Darfur and other parts of Sudan, became displaced and resided in the Soba Aradi camp in Khartoum.

In May 2005, a team of police officers and soldiers entered the camp, sealed off parts of it and sought to forcibly relocate several thousand resident families.

The residents resisted and violence broke out, resulting in the killing of several police officers and IDPs. Over the next few weeks, the police arrested and detained at least 684 persons in connection with the incident.

The 88 were held for more than twelve months without any charges being brought against them, were not provided with any custodial safeguards, such as access to a lawyer, to family members and to medical care, and were not allowed to challenge the lawfulness of their detention.

At the Khartoum police headquarters, applicants were subjected to beatings with sticks and whips and to falaqa (beating on the sole of the feet causing excruciating pain) and death threats. They were also not given food for two days and deprived of medical care. The treatment was inflicted ostensibly as punishment for the riots and as a means to extract confessions.

After their transfer to Kober prison, the detainees were held incommunicado, were denied access to toilet facilities and were subjected to forced standing and whippings. Most of them were released without charges in June and July 2006. Subsequent complaints to the Sudanese authorities concerning the ill-treatment and torture did not result in any investigations.

REDRESS fights for justice for victims of military injustice in Egypt

On 9 March 2011, Samira Ibrahim Mohamed Mahmoud and Rasha Ali Abdel Rahman, two female Egyptian citizens, were arrested by military officials in Tahrir Square for their participation in a protest during the Egyptian Uprising.

After their arrest, they allege that they were held in a military prison, beaten and subjected to electroshocks. They claim that they were both, in separate incidents, stripped naked in full view of male military officers. Following this, a military doctor subjected them to forced genital examinations. No explanation was given for the examinations.

In March 2012, a military court found the doctor accused of performing the forced genital examinations innocent of all charges. In the wake of this decision, Samira and Rasha decided to bring the case before the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights, as the main regional human rights mechanism. Their cases were filed with the assistance of the Egyptian Initiative for Personal Rights and Interights. REDRESS joined the case in December 2013, arguing that the forced genital examinations constituted rape and torture.

Intervention in Shestopalov v The Russian Federation

In 2004, a Russian teenager, Mr Shestopalov, was questioned by police in relation to the sexual assault of a former classmate. Mr Shestopalov was beaten and strangled until he signed a statement admitting to voluntary sexual intercourse with the rape victim. The victim later confirmed that Mr Shestopalov did not rape her.

Mr Shestopalov brought a complaint against the police for the treatment he experienced while in detention. During the police investigations into the complaint, Mr Shestopalov was able to identify a police officer that took part in the torture. However, these investigations were later suspended on the grounds that it was not possible to identify the alleged perpetrators.

In 2008, a Russian court awarded Mr Shestopalov 50,000 rubles (approximately EUR €1,030) in compensation for his treatment, but no further investigations were carried out. At the European Court of Human Rights Mr Shestopalov complained that: no effective investigation against the police took place, and the compensation he received was insufficient to redress the infringement of his rights.

In January 2014 the European Court of Human Rights granted REDRESS permission to intervene in the case as a third party. On 18 February 2014, REDRESS filed its comments in the case. REDRESS' intervention laid out international standards and comparative jurisprudence on two issues: 1) the effectiveness of investigations where several law enforcement officials have been involved; and 2) the factors to be taken into consideration when determining the adequacy of damages for torture and ill-treatment.

JUSTICE IN THE CONTEXT OF MASS VICTIMISATION

Countries currently facing, or emerging from, situations of massive human rights violations face particular challenges in affording justice and redress to victims.

The context in which torture occurs, the scale of the crime, who perpetrates it, why and how it is perpetrated and who are the victims can also differ significantly from that of relatively peaceful or stable environments. Furthermore, in an immediate post-conflict context, there may be distinct opportunities to progress justice and accountability. However, transitional justice approaches may not always address the deep-seated causes and consequences of victimisation. Also, the political context in which such measures are developed may result in ad hoc or partial responses which may not always result in effective and adequate forms of reparation.

REDRESS' focus on justice for victims is vital to bring to the debate, given that this perspective may be absent from other external interventions, and its internal articulation could be very weak in the wake of major societal conflict.

VICTIMS' ACCESS TO JUSTICE

REDRESS has been working to build capacity and encourage the development of law and policy on transitional justice and reparations in numerous conflict affected countries. Our work has centred on promoting victims' access to justice processes. Within Africa, REDRESS has used the NGO side meeting processes at the African Commission on Human and Peoples' Rights to foster awareness and increase collaboration amongst civil society groups working on mass crimes cases across the continent.

“ We are working with REDRESS because we would like to provide more support, to victims ”

In the Democratic Republic of the Congo, REDRESS has been working with victims' groups in the East of the country. It has provided training and facilitated numerous outreach meetings with groups in Ituri and North Kivu throughout the year. These have focused on building awareness about ongoing legal proceedings at the International Criminal Court, including explaining court processes and decisions and assisting groups to engage with the Court. Also we have sought to identify gaps in local justice delivery for victims of mass crimes, including by working with local lawyers and other justice actors to assess efforts to prosecute alleged perpetrators of mass gender based violence and afford reparation to the victims. In this context, we have held workshops with lawyers in Goma, North Kivu, on the challenges for victims to access justice before local courts. We have also engaged United Nations bodies, such as the Committee on the Elimination of Violence Against Women and the Human Rights Council's Universal Periodic Review process, to raise awareness about the need for justice system strengthening in the DRC.

In Kenya, REDRESS, in partnership with the local NGO Kituo Cha Sheria, has organised workshops on victims' rights and domestic accountability mechanisms operating in the country. The focus of meetings has been the efforts to establish an International Crimes Division within the High Court of Kenya and the implementation of the Truth, Justice and Reconciliation Commission's (TJRC) recommendations and related advocacy strategies to strengthen victims' rights to justice and reparation in the context of those processes. Also, we have worked to foster information-sharing on the International Criminal Court's involvement in the investigation and prosecution of post-election violence cases, and the roles for victims to engage in such proceedings. REDRESS and Kituo Cha Sheria published and disseminated a guide on victims and the ICC in Kenya, and also facilitated discussions on a draft statement to be undersigned by participating civil society organisations on victims' rights in relation to the Kenyan International Crimes Division.

REDRESS and Kituo Cha Sheria's guide explains how victims of the Post-Election Violence can seek justice before the ICC.

In Uganda, REDRESS is working with local groups to engage with transitional justice processes within the country. Within the year, we facilitated discussions with victims' networks on reparations, building on from experience in other countries. We co-organised a two-day workshop to help further discussions of civil society on the issue of "interim reparations". We also co-hosted a round-table with officials of the International Crimes Division in Kampala, in collaboration with the Uganda Victims' Foundation and the Ugandan Coalition for the ICC. The agenda included updates on the work of the ICD, including recent hearings in the Thomas Kwoyelo case; exchanges on victims and witnesses issues arising in the ICD legal framework; and specific discussions on protection and outreach.

REDRESS organised a round-table with officials of the International Crimes Division in Kampala, Uganda, in collaboration with the Uganda Victims' Foundation and the Ugandan Coalition for the ICC.

In Rwanda, we worked with the Survivor's Fund (SURF) and other actors to provide information on comparative approaches to reparations, which have helped invigorate advocacy campaigns relating to reparations within the country.

REDRESS also provided training and capacity building to groups affected by massive or systematic human rights violations and conducted related advocacy regarding transitional and other justice measures in diverse countries, including Bahrain, Ivory Coast, Libya, Nepal, Syria, Sudan and Tunisia.

ADVOCACY BEFORE THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL COURT

The International Criminal Court is a key mechanism with the potential to address some of the worst modern-day atrocities and afford justice to the many victims. REDRESS has a longstanding interest in the progressive development of the International Criminal Court as an institution and its capacity to deliver justice for international crimes. Our work on the International Criminal Court focuses on:

- Advocating for strong procedures at the International Criminal Court to ensure victims' access to justice and reparation.

REDRESS continues to coordinate the Victims' Rights Working Group, an informal global network of experts and advocates working to promote justice for victims at the ICC, operating under the auspices of the NGO Coalition for the International Criminal Court. The Working Group currently comprises about 500 members including individuals and groups located in countries affected by ICC investigations and prosecutions.

During the year, REDRESS helped to organise and disseminate joint position papers of the Working Group, issued newsletters and jurisprudence updates on victims' rights and coordinated advocacy initiatives aimed at the Assembly of States Parties and ICC officials. As part of this work, REDRESS helped to convene an independent panel of experts to advise the Registry and other organs of the Court on strategies to ensure meaningful and effective victim participation.

In addition, REDRESS issued a number of policy papers aimed at considering in detail some of the challenges to give effect to victims' rights at the ICC. It also provided comments to the Office of the Prosecutor on its Draft

- Ensuring that victims affected by ICC proceedings have access to the Court to express their views and concerns, and that the local organisations and lawyers assisting them on the ground have the wherewithal to do so effectively

REDRESS works with victims, grassroots intermediary organisations providing support to victims on the ground and legal representatives for victims. REDRESS has provided help to victims and intermediaries to apply to participate in proceedings and has helped to convey certain challenges faced by victims during the application process. It has also raised concerns about the need to protect victims and witnesses and to support intermediaries and continues to engage with the Registry to improve the system of legal representation for victims.

MEASURES TO ADDRESS SEXUAL VIOLENCE DURING CONFLICT

Sexual violence as a form of subjugation and punishment or as a means of destroying an opposing community is a common weapon in conflict, affecting women and girls, who are particularly vulnerable, but also men and boys. REDRESS has been working to draw attention to the plight of victims of such crimes and their needs for justice and reparation. The challenges to access justice are compounded in conflict and post-conflict contexts, and made more acute by discriminatory attitudes and cross-cutting marginalisation affecting many victims of gender-based and sexual violence.

- In March 2014, REDRESS provided commentary and input to the United Nations' Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights on its draft analytical study on "Human rights and transitional justice". Our submission focused on ways to ensure the effective participation of victims of sexual and gender-based violence in justice processes in conflict and post-conflict situations. In doing so, it considered participation in both ordinary domestic justice systems and transitional justice mechanisms.

- REDRESS was a member of the UK Foreign and Commonwealth Office's Preventing Sexual Violence Initiative (PSVI) working group on documentation. The role of the working group was to provide guidance to the FCO on its Protocol for Preventing Sexual Violence. REDRESS actively participated in the Summit leading to the adoption of the Protocol.

- In October 2013, REDRESS released the thematic report Redress for Rape, which considers the international jurisprudence on rape as a form of torture or other ill-treatment.

REDRESS is also working with victims of sexual and other forms of gender based violence and their lawyers to access hybrid, regional and international tribunals, including through documentation and assistance with victim application processes, engagement with prosecutors and/or related support and third party interventions. In particular, we are actively pursuing cases relating to conflict era sexual violence in the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Kenya, Nepal, Sri Lanka and Sudan.

REDRESS participated in the expert meetings at the Global Summit to End Sexual Violence in Conflict that took place in London in June 2014. In the months leading to the Summit, REDRESS provided expert input to the Foreign Office's new International Protocol on the Investigation and Documentation of Sexual Violence in Conflict. REDRESS also published the thematic report "Redress for Rape".

INFLUENCING NATIONAL LAWS AND INSTITUTIONS

REDRESS works to ensure that international standards relating to the prohibition of torture and reparation for survivors of torture and related international crimes are applied at the national level. We strive to inform and influence policies and practices through expert analysis and recommendations on a range of thematic issues linked to the prohibition of torture and survivor's rights.

Internationally, REDRESS works to overcome obstacles to justice in countries where torture is endemic by ensuring that international standards are applied at national level. REDRESS achieves this objective through partnerships with local organisations; developing joint strategies that involve capacity building for civil society as well as government actors at the national level; advocacy towards national policy makers and litigation to seek justice and reparation for survivors and establish useful precedent for later cases.

REDRESS has formal partnerships with key organisations in Europe, Sub-Saharan Africa, Central and South America, Middle East and North Africa and Asia which provide cornerstones to REDRESS' work.

- In October 2013, REDRESS published a global report on reparation for torture, which was the culmination of global research and a series of five meetings bringing together lawyers and civil society groups in the regions of Sub-Saharan Africa, Middle East and North Africa, the Americas, Europe and Asia. The report considers the law and practice relating to reparation for torture throughout the world.
- During the year, REDRESS produced advocacy briefings, reports and submissions in relation to Bahrain, Nepal, Peru, Libya, Sudan and the United States of America. These reports considered a variety of issues concerning remedies for torture, including the particular contexts of torture committed in the context of counter-terrorism measures.
- REDRESS also carried out training and capacity building in an array of countries, on the legal documentation of torture cases, investigation techniques, casework strategies, and other obligations of local authorities to investigate and prosecute torture cases.

During the year, REDRESS produced advocacy briefings, reports and submissions on Bahrain, Nepal, Peru, Libya, Sudan and the USA. In the photo, one of our reports on Bahrain (published jointly with IRCT) and a meeting with Bahraini victims and activists at our offices.

As a UK based organisation, REDRESS also has a dedicated advocacy focus to ensure that the UK Government meets its international obligations and stays true to the absolute prohibition of torture in all respects. This includes ensuring that strong policy level statements which reject torture are substantiated with good practice by all relevant agencies. This includes how the UK Government responds to torture allegations in its foreign relations as well as its response to allegations which concern UK officials, e.g., the UK Government's performance in investigating, prosecuting and affording reparation to victims of torture and other prohibited treatment allegedly carried out by or with the acquiescence, acknowledgement or complicity of UK officials (whether they are border guards, security officials, persons in charge of places of detention, military, police or private actors with functions delegated by the State).

It also includes monitoring the performance of the immigration, police and prosecution services as appropriate in detecting persons who are located in the United Kingdom and are alleged to have perpetrated torture or related crimes abroad and ensuring that those persons are duly investigated and prosecuted in accordance with national law and international obligations.

REDRESS also monitors the performance of consular officials and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office more broadly in adequately responding to torture allegations made by British nationals and provides input on how this work may be improved.

For example, during the year:

- REDRESS advocated for the Government to carry out a full and effective investigation into the alleged role of UK officials in the unlawful detention, torture and rendition of terror suspects. The allegations were the subject of the Detainee Inquiry chaired by Sir Peter Gibson, and have now been tasked to the parliamentary Intelligence and Security Committee

- REDRESS advocated the Foreign and Commonwealth Office to revise its policy on consular assistance and diplomatic protection for UK nationals tortured abroad. It also provided oral and written submission to the Foreign Affairs Committee which had been tasked to inquire into the matter
- REDRESS provided a submission to the United Nations Committee Against Torture on its List of Issues for Consideration of the UK'S 5th State Party Report
- REDRESS organised together with the All Party Parliamentary Human Rights Group, a public roundtable on 'Reducing vulnerability to torture: Challenges to UK's foreign policy' at the House of Commons. The event offered an opportunity for REDRESS' partners to raise issues relating to the UK's foreign policy, in particular the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's anti-torture strategy.

PROMOTING INTERNATIONAL STANDARDS

REDRESS works to ensure that survivors' rights are recognised and protected in international and regional treaties, declarations and related principles, and to make certain that the bodies interpreting such instruments positively affirm and practically advance such standards in their daily work.

The recent adoption by the UN Committee Against Torture of General Comment 3, on the meaning of "redress" is a recent successful example. In this case, REDRESS provided substantive input to the Committee throughout the drafting process, and continues to work to ensure that the adopted General Comment is widely known and implemented by States.

REDRESS' international standard setting work consists in carrying out our analytical research on the meaning of existing standards, clarifying standards which are vaguely articulated as well as carrying out advocacy to introduce new standards where the existing ones do not adequately address barriers to justice.

REDRESS has been urged by a range of stakeholders and mandate holders to maintain its emphasis on giving support to regional and international institutions, and advocating that they continue to address institutional weaknesses so that they can address victims' needs and rights most adequately and effectively. Efforts are aimed at strengthening the international framework (encouraging a transition from soft law to hard law where appropriate); translating these international standards into regional practices; and on implementation in-country.

It is particularly important to defend existing standards in the face of an increasingly hostile political environment regarding issues of non-refoulement and even the absolute prohibition on torture. The International Standards programme works in synergy with REDRESS' other programmes. It takes as inspiration the systemic barriers to justice that victims face, which become known through REDRESS' other programmes of work. It also ensures that new standards and related international jurisprudence are reflected in the ongoing work at the domestic level.

UN HUMAN RIGHTS BODIES

- REDRESS submitted numerous reports and commentary to the UN Human Rights Committee, Committee against Torture, Committee on the Elimination of Violence Against Women and the Working Group on Disappearances. It also engaged actively with UN mandate holders such as the Special Rapporteur on Torture and the Special Rapporteur on Violence against Women. It contributed commentary on the meaning of particular treaty provisions and their application to particular contexts, including on issues as diverse as victim and witness protection, reparation and the enforcement by States of treaty obligations.

AFRICAN COMMISSION ON HUMAN AND PEOPLES' RIGHTS (ACHPR)

In addition to the numerous claims REDRESS has filed with the African Commission on behalf of victims of torture in Africa, REDRESS is seeking to work with the African Commission and other institutions in Africa to strengthen their approach to victims of torture and related international crimes.

Our report "Reaching for Justice" analysed the past practice of human rights institutions in Africa in regards to victim's claims for reparation. In 2013, REDRESS also produced a manual on how to file a communication before the African Commission.

For example,

- In March 2014, REDRESS attended an expert meeting convened by the Committee for the Prevention of Torture in Africa. REDRESS, together with its partner, the Centre for the Study of Violence and Reconciliation, were asked to participate in the meeting and address the Committee on the content and scope of a potential General Comment on Article 5 of the African Charter on Human and Peoples' Rights. The invitation was preceded by previous engagement of the Committee by a range of organisations working and advocating for the strengthening of the rights of victims of torture and ill-treatment in Africa.
- REDRESS produced a report on reparation within the African human rights system. The purpose of the report was to describe and analyse the past practise of human rights institutions in Africa on assessing victims' claims for reparation, issuing awards and engaging in follow-up with Member States in order to ensure that awards and related recommendations are implemented and to provide recommendations to African institutions on areas for strengthening. The report also assisted to galvanise civil society engagement on the issue of reparations, through the Pan-African Reparation Initiative.

EUROPEAN INSTITUTIONS

REDRESS has been working jointly with a number of civil society groups to strengthen European institutions for the protection of human rights and to counter impunity.

- With respect to the European Court of Human Rights, REDRESS has joined a number of NGOs in making a series of submissions highlighting key concerns over the draft of Protocols 15 and 16 to the European Convention on Human Rights, which have the potential to undermine the functioning of the European Court of Human Rights. These included amendments referring to "the margin of appreciation doctrine" developed by the Court in relation to the interpretation and application of the Convention by states, the reduction of the period for applying to the Court from 6 to 4 months and the legal effects of advisory opinions issued by the Court. In January 2014, REDRESS made further comments on the importance of the right of individual application before the Court, interim measures of relief and awards of just satisfaction.
- REDRESS has been working to collaborate with and support the EU Genocide Network, a network of state investigators and prosecutors working on international crimes cases within the EU. In the year, REDRESS and its partners provided commentary to the GENVAL Working Party of the EU Council on strengthening efforts to combat impunity within the EU and its Member States for crimes under international law. REDRESS also commented on the implementing guidelines for the EU

Directive on Minimum Standards for Victims of Crimes, explaining their relevance for international crimes victims in the EU or affected by investigations and prosecutions in EU Member States and hosted a meeting in Brussels where these issues were canvassed.

REDRESS organised a conference with partners and the support of the EU Genocide Network in The Hague in October 2013 to discuss ways to enhance opportunities for victims and witnesses to participate in investigations and prosecutions of international crimes.

“REDRESS works to ensure that survivors’ rights are recognised and protected in international and regional treaties, declarations and related principles”

Communications serves a number of purposes for REDRESS:

- Improving the visibility of REDRESS and its work in order to showcase the work we are doing and build communities of support;
- Strengthening public awareness of the scale of the problem of torture in order to advance policy agendas, explain why there should be zero tolerance of torture, and provide for a more rehabilitative environment for survivors through greater awareness of victims’ experiences, rights and needs;
- Making REDRESS’ services known to potential clients, front-line agencies working with torture survivors and civil society groups globally in order to extend our reach.

In the past year, REDRESS’ work has been covered in a variety of media outlets, including major international news outlets and local media in countries affected by REDRESS’ work. In addition, REDRESS’ social media presence continues to grow, through Facebook and Twitter pages and increased traffic on our website.

PUBLIC BENEFIT

The Trustees confirm that they have complied with the guidance of the Charities Act 2011 to have due regard to public benefit published by the Commission in determining the activities undertaken by the Charity. The Trustees are satisfied that the aims and objectives of the charity, and the activities reported on above to achieve those aims, meet these principles.

EVALUATION OF OUR WORK

During the year, REDRESS carried out an internal evaluation which assessed the extent to which REDRESS met the objectives set out in its prior three year strategic plan and to inform future strategies of the organisation. This consisted of a series of internal staff meetings and a trustee and staff Away-Day to consider past work achievements and to assess REDRESS' current positioning as a specialist international human rights organisation with a focused mandate and having regard to the evolving external landscape.

Also during the year, one of REDRESS' largest programme grants was evaluated by an independent expert. The independent expert was contracted to evaluate REDRESS' recently completed EU funded project on Reparation for Torture: Global Sharing of Experience. The project involved work in four core target countries (India, Peru, Sri Lanka, Sudan) and the evaluation included a review of the various outputs and reports as well as meetings with programme staff and stakeholders in London, Lima, Peru and Geneva.

In his final report, the evaluator gave high scores to the project on all the evaluation criteria (relevance and quality of design, efficiency of implementation, effectiveness, impact and potential sustainability). In particular he noted that REDRESS' national partners value the technical assistance they receive from REDRESS in taking cases, particularly using international mechanisms.

The overall strategy of combining human rights litigation with research, publications and networking opportunities developed during this project was extremely relevant and it is recommended that it should be continued in future ones. He indicated that the 'outputs of this project generally seem to have been excellent', and the 'implementation strategy developed during this project was extremely effective and it is recommended that it should be continued in future ones'.

LOOKING FORWARD

REDRESS trustees issued a new Strategic Plan covering a three year period from 1 April 2014. This plan builds on REDRESS' prior successes, its unique positioning and the evolving human rights landscape in countries where REDRESS is active. In particular, the new plan:

- underscores REDRESS' desire to strengthen its partnerships with local civil society groups in order to maximise impact;
- commits REDRESS to working in countries where torture is endemic and taking special measures to ensure that particularly marginalised groups who experience or are especially vulnerable to torture are able to benefit from REDRESS' interventions;

- commits REDRESS to work to end State complicity in torture and seek justice for the victims of such collusion, particularly in the context of the phenomenon of democratic States' collusion in torture during counter-terrorism or wider security operations;
- underlines REDRESS' goal of developing and strengthening the organisation' operational capacity and resources to support and sustain its programme work and operational running; in particular by increasing and diversifying its funding base, with a focus on core funding.

During the year, REDRESS carried out an internal evaluation to assess past objectives and inform future strategies with staff and trustees.

STRUCTURE, GOVERNANCE AND MANAGEMENT

The Board of Trustees confirms that the annual report and financial statements of the charity comply with current statutory requirements, the requirements of the charity's governing document and the provisions of the Statement of Recommended Practice (SORP) "Accounting and Reporting by Charities" issued in March 2005.

The charity may by Ordinary Resolution in General Meeting appoint any person who is willing to act to be a Trustee, either to fill a vacancy or as an additional Trustee. At every third Annual General Meeting thereafter all the Trustees shall retire from office. Retiring Trustees are eligible for re-election. Trustees are recruited personally by existing members for their legal knowledge, experience of and interest in the charity's work.

The Board of Trustees is responsible, inter alia, for setting and overseeing the overall direction, policies and finances of the charity. It has the power from time to time to adopt and make, alter or revoke, bye-laws for the regulation of the charity and otherwise for the purposes for which the charity is established, so long as such bye-laws are consistent with the Memorandum or Articles of Association. The Director is responsible for the day-to-day management of the charity and execution of policies and practices set by the Board of Trustees. There have been no changes in the objectives since the last annual report. REDRESS plans to continue the activities as outlined above in the forthcoming years subject to satisfactory funding arrangements.

INDUCTION AND TRAINING OF TRUSTEES

Trustees receive an induction programme which involves meetings with all of the charity's staff and consultants and is intended to inform them of the charity's work and objectives.

FINANCIAL PERFORMANCE

The charity had net outgoing resources on unrestricted funds of £29,759 for the year (2013 – £51,408) before transfers. After transfers, together with the accumulated surplus brought forward from previous years, the charity now has an accumulated surplus on unrestricted funds of £122,201 (2013 - £151,960). Restricted funds carried forward at 31 March 2014 amounted to £362,747 (2013 - £549,446), following net outgoing resources for the year of £186,699 (2013 – £170,098). The funds carried forward are sufficient for the activities for which the funds were provided.

The balance sheet shows that funds held at the end of the year were £216,458 less than at the start of the year, £187,699 (86%) of this reduction being in restricted funds. This reflects monies held that have been received in advance for future years' projects and it varies according to the project plans and the timing of grant income to fund them.

The Trustees' efforts in developing and implementing the charity's fundraising strategy during the year resulted in growth in total income.

The Trustees have also carefully addressed the complementarities of the charity's work with other national and international organisations to assure donors that funding contributes the maximum impact to a co-ordinated approach to the charity's overall goals.

RESERVES POLICY

REDRESS holds Reserves for a number of reasons:

- To enable activities to continue in the period between major projects supported by Restricted Grant Income;
- To enable REDRESS to initiate projects which can demonstrate to a funder a need for support;
- To invest in future income generation;
- To cover any unforeseen expenditure; and
- To provide cash flow support for Restricted Grant Income paid in arrears.

REDRESS Legal Advisor Kevin Laue reaches out to refugees and migrant communities during the Celebrating Sanctuary Festival in London.

At the year-end REDRESS had free reserves of £106,573, calculated as the total value of Unrestricted Funds less the value of Fixed Assets which are not immediately realisable for use under the Policy. The Trustees calculate that REDRESS requires a range of free reserves of between £93,121 and £164,268. The current free reserves are within the target range. The Trustees consider this level to be appropriate because, over the next year, a number of grants are due for renewal with the outcome of applications currently being uncertain.

The Trustees review the organisational Budget regularly during the Financial Year and will review the Reserves Policy annually as part of this process.

RISK MANAGEMENT

The Trustees have identified that the main risks are (i) not meeting fundraising targets and (ii) ensuring that funders' accountability requirements continue to be met. A strategy is in place to achieve the renewal of expired grants and to identify potential new funders. As part of their risk management review, the Trustees have agreed a contingency plan with the Director and will closely monitor the progress on grant applications.

STATEMENT OF THE BOARD OF TRUSTEES' RESPONSIBILITIES

The Trustees (who are also directors of The Redress Trust for the purposes of company law), are responsible for preparing the Trustees' Report and the financial statements in accordance with applicable law and United Kingdom Accounting Standards (United Kingdom Generally Accepted Accounting Practice).

They are also responsible for safeguarding the assets of the charitable company and hence for taking reasonable steps for the prevention and detection of fraud and other irregularities.

In so far as we are aware:

- There is no relevant audit information of which the charitable company's auditor is unaware; and
- The trustees have taken all steps that they ought to have taken to make themselves aware of any relevant audit information and to establish that the auditor is aware of that information.

Our trustees are responsible, among other tasks, for safeguarding the assets of the charitable company.

In preparing this report, the Trustees have taken advantage of the small companies exemptions provided by section 415A of the Companies Act 2006

1. ACCOUNTING POLICIES

A summary of the principal accounting policies, all of which have been applied consistently throughout the year and with the preceding year, is set out below:

BASIS OF PREPARATION OF FINANCIAL STATEMENTS

The financial statements have been prepared under the historical cost convention, on the going concern basis and in accordance with the Statement of Recommended Practice (SORP) "Accounting and Reporting by Charities" issued in March 2005 and with applicable accounting standards. The financial statements include the results of the charity's operations which are described in the Board of Trustees' Report and all of which are continuing.

The charity has taken advantage of the exemption in Financial Reporting Standard No. 1 from the requirement to produce a cash flow statement on the grounds that it is a small company.

COMPANY STATUS

The charity is a company limited by guarantee. The members of the company are the Board of Trustees named on Page 37. In the event of the charity being wound up, the liability in respect of the guarantee is limited to £10 per member of the charity.

FUND ACCOUNTING

General funds are unrestricted funds which are available for use at the discretion of the Board of Trustees in furtherance of the general objectives of the charity and which have not been designated for other purposes.

Restricted funds are funds that are to be used in accordance with specific restrictions imposed by the donors, which have been raised by the charity for particular purposes. The aim and use of each restricted fund is set out in the notes to the financial statements.

Investment income, gains and losses are allocated to the appropriate fund.

INCOMING RESOURCES

All incoming resources are included in the Statement of Financial Activities when the charity is legally entitled to the income and the amount can be quantified with reasonable accuracy.

RESOURCES EXPENDED

All expenditure is accounted for on an accruals basis and has been included under expense categories that aggregate all costs for allocation to activities. Where costs cannot be directly attributed to particular activities they have been allocated using the ACEVO Full Cost Recovery Model.

Governance costs are those not attributable to direct expenditure and have been incurred in ensuring compliance with constitutional and statutory requirements.

TANGIBLE FIXED ASSETS AND DEPRECIATION

Assets acquired for the long-term use of the charity and having an initial cost or valuation of £250 or more are capitalised as tangible fixed assets. Tangible fixed assets are stated at cost or valuation less depreciation. Depreciation is provided at rates calculated to write off the cost or valuation of fixed assets, less their estimated residual value, over their expected useful lives on the following bases:

Office equipment	-	4 years Straight line
Fixtures & fittings	-	6 years Straight line

FOREIGN CURRENCIES

Assets and liabilities in foreign currencies are translated into sterling at the rates of exchange ruling at the balance sheet date. Transactions in foreign currencies are translated into sterling at the rate ruling on the date of the transaction. Exchange differences are taken into account in arriving at the operating surplus.

PENSIONS

The charity operates a defined contribution pension policy and the pension charge represents the amounts payable by the charity to funds established by individuals in respect of the year.

TAXATION

The charity is exempt from income tax and corporation tax on its charitable activities. The charity is not registered for VAT and is unable to recover VAT on its purchases. All irrecoverable VAT is included within the appropriate headings.
